IT is much to be regretted that, of so many persons interred in this antient Cathedral, so few memorials remain. Even the names of the “illustrious dead” have, in great measure, disappeared; and, of course, few of their sepulchral monuments are, any longer, to be found.

It is the design of the following work to bring together such of the former, as lie scattered about in different places; and, also, to present to the eye of the reader the Inscriptions on the latter, which still exist; and thus to arrest, in some degree, the progress of time. This, it is hoped, will interest, not only the frequenters of the Cathedral, but also, in some respects, the students of Irish history.

The author begs to tender his acknowledgments to the Dean and Chapter for permission to publish the portion of their Records herein contained; to Sir Bernard Burke, C.B., LL.D., Ulster King of Arms, for free access to the “Funeral Entries” preserved in the Record Tower, Dublin Castle; to John H. Glascott, Esq., J.P., Co. Wexford, of Ulster’s Office, for his kindness in decyphering difficult entries, and for general assistance: also to the Rev. Alexander Leeper, D.D., Prebendary of St. Audöen's; and Lancelot Studdert, Esq., LL.D., Barrister-at-Law, for valuable aid: and to other friends who afforded encouragement in the prosecution and completion of a task that has proved to be much more laborious than was anticipated.

“Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke and Strigul (the place of his residence), was surnamed “Strongbow,” because of his exceeding strength; so that he drew an extraordinary strong bow. His arms were so long that he could stand upright, and with the palms of his hands touch his knees.”* (Thos. Mills, apud Cox’s History of Ireland, p. 44.)

* A somewhat similar account is given by Sir Walter Scott of the

He died A.D. 1177 according to Pembridge, Giraldus Cambrensis, and the Monument in the Cathedral; but, according to Matthew Paris and the Four Masters, in A.D. 1176. He is one of those mentioned in the Christ Church "Book of Obits," for whose soul prayer was to be made.

This Monument, generally supposed to be Strongbow's, is now said to be that of Thomas FitzJames, eighth Earl of Desmond, beheaded in Drogheda in A.D. 1467, and to have been brought to Christ Church by Sir Henry Sidney, to replace the original of Strongbow, destroyed by the fall of the south wall A.D. 1562, during the Lord Lieutenancy of the Earl of Sussex. The figure lying by the side is said to be that of Eva, Strongbow's wife; and that its present mutilated condition is owing to the fall of the roof, which destroyed the original of Strongbow. (L. P., I, 70 n.)

To all this, exception is taken by J. H. Glascott, Esq., of Ulster's Office, who states that the arms on the shield are not those of the Earl of Desmond, but are the arms of FitzOsbert, one of Strongbow's followers (Argent on a chief azure three crosses crosslet fitché of the field); and that the, so-called, monument of Eva is, in reality, that of Strongbow's son, who was cut in two by his father as punishment of his cowardice.

celebrated outlaw, Rob Rôy. He says, "His stature was not of the tallest, but his person was uncommonly strong and compact. The greatest peculiarities of his frame were the breadth of his shoulders, and the great and almost disproportioned length of his arms; so remarkable, indeed, that it was said he could, without stooping, tie the garters of his Highland hose, which are placed two inches below the knee." ("The Highland Clans, with an account of Rob Roy and the Macgregors." Edinburgh, A. and C. Black, 1856, p. 131.)

Hackett, in his collection of Epitaphs, gives the following from the tomb* of Strongbow at Christ Church, Dublin;—

“Nate ingrater, mihi pugnanti terga dedisti.

Non mihi, sed genti, regno quoque terga dedisti.”

“This alludes,” says Banks, “to a story that Strongbow’s only son, a youth about seventeen, frightened with the numbers and ululations of the Irish in a great battle, ran away; but being afterwards informed of his father’s victory, he joyfully returned to congratulate him. But the severe general, having first upbraided him with his cowardice, caused him to be immediately executed by cutting him off in the middle with a sword. Such, in former times, was the detestation of dastardliness.” (Burke’s “Extinct Peerage,” A.D. 1866, p. 121.) Mr. Glascott says that the figure, alluded to, is that of a youth wearing chain armour; and that he is represented as supporting his intestines with his hands. Leland, in his Itinerary (vol. iii. f. 172), states that there is an inscription to the memory of Strongbow in the cloisters of Gloucester Cathedral, which runs thus: “Hic jacet Ricardus Strongbow Filius Gilberti Comitis de Pembroke;” but Giraldus Cambrensis, who accompanied Prince John to Ireland, expressly says that the earl was interred in Christ Church, and that his funeral obsequies were performed by Archbishop Laurence O’Toole. (“Conquest of Ireland,” book ii., chap. 14.)

Payments of bonds, rents, &c. used to be made at this tomb; and continued to be made so late as A.D. 1871.

Suvertius, in his book of Epitaphs, gives the following on Strongbow; but assigns neither name nor date:—

* i. e. The tomb originally erected to Strongbow. The arms of Strongbow are—Or, three chevronels gules in chief a label of five points azure.

At the restoration of the Cathedral by Sir Henry Sydney, a slab (still to be seen) was inserted in the south wall of the nave, with the following inscription :—

Higher up on the wall stood a stone (yet preserved) on which is inscribed the date "AN. DJ. 1180." To what it refers does not appear. (See Archdall's "Monasticon," p. 150.)

II.

JOHN COMYN, ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN,

OB. A.D. 1212.

The old wooden tomb in Christ Church, commonly called St. Laurence O'Toole's, has been by some assigned to Comyn. It is certainly not that of St. Laurence O'Toole (Lorcan O'Tuathall), who died at Au, or Auge. in Normandy, where his relics were seen A.D. 1840. (Kelly's "Cambrensis Eversus," vol. ii., p. 648. Cotton's "Fasti," vol. ii., p. 10.)

Others think that it is the tomb of Henri de Loundres, who is said to have been buried beneath a wooden tomb opposite to that of Comyn, this latter (according to some authorities) being buried on the south side of the altar under a marble monument. Neither of these opinions is correct; for a close inspection shews the figure lying on the tomb to be that of a mitred abbot, and not one of an archbishop.

Archbishop Comyn erected St. Patrick's Cathedral, A.D. 1190.

The original is in Norman French; and the translation given infra was made by John Robert Daniel Tyssen, Esq., F.S.A., who was the first to give an interpretation, all previous attempts to do so having failed.

Mr. Tyssen refers the date of the inscription to the beginning of the fourteenth century, judging from the character of the letters used; and he finds John Lumbard's name often occurring in the Public Records of the time (King Edward III.). (See, at large, "Old Register" of Christ Church Cathedral, p. 66.)

SONS OF LORD GREY OF WILTON, LORD
DEPUTY OF IRELAND,

IN THE REIGN OF QUEEN ELIZABETH, 1580—1582,

A.D. 1582.

—o—

HERE LIETH BURIED THE SECOND AND THIRD SONNES OF THE RIGHT HONORABLE SIR ARTHURE GREY, KNIGHT OF THE ORDER, LORD GREY OF WILTON, AND OF THE LADY JANA SIBILLA, HIS WIFE, WHICH CHILDREN DIED IN THE CASTEL OF DUBLIN, IN THE TIME OF HIS DEPUTACION HEERE.

The above is engraven on a brass plate affixed to the wall; and on it are the arms of Lord Grey, with the motto,

“At vincet pauperiem virtus.”

Sir Arthur Grey de Wilton was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, 1580, and acquired great renown by suppressing the rebellion of Desmond.

His father, Sir William Grey, the thirteenth Baron, was attainted. “How he came to be attainted,” says Dugdale, “I have not seen, but in the first of Elizabeth, he was restored in blood.” The next year he was made a Knight of the Garter.

It has been conjectured, that on his restoration to his dignity and estate, he assumed the above motto. The title became extinct, A.D. 1604. (See “Ancient and Dormant Peerages,” by John Burke, Esq. London, 1831, p. 231.)

4. His Daughter, Lady Margareta, Countess of Hillsborough,
 Sole survivors of eight children.

There formerly stood near the high altar in St. Mary's Chapel, a fine monument of its Founder, the "Great Earl of Kildare" (Gerald, eighth Earl), where his arms within the Garter, and those of his wife, with the arms of many of his family were placed; until they were defaced by Dr. William Moreton, Bishop of Kildare and Dean of Christ Church, when he repaired the church between 1677 and 1705. (E. K., 1: 69.) A drawing of this monument (long since destroyed) exists in an old book in Ulster's Office, called "Monumenta Eblanæ," where in the front alone may be seen thirteen compartments or panels, bearing the arms of different members of the family. The sides also are panelled, bearing arms.

In the pew belonging to the Kildare family, there was formerly a brass plate, upon which was inscribed the following:—

“This seate belongs to John. Earl of Kildare,*
“and his family, for ever; being conveyed to him
“by the Deane and Chapter of Christ Church,
“November 17th, anno Domini 1696.”

“There is a tradition (says the Duke of Leinster in his book, “The Earls of Kildare,” p. 303), that at the end of every seven years the Earl of Kildare, [Gerald, eleventh Earl] may be seen riding across the Curragh on a white charger, shod with silver, and holding a cup in his hand; and that when he shall appear without the cup his race will become extinct. But according to another legend, when his horse’s shoes are worn off, he will return to destroy the enemies of Ireland.”

There is yet a third version of this tradition, as given by the Duke of Leinster in his little work, “Castle of Kilkea,” 1865 (printed, but not published, and a copy of which his Grace was pleased to present to the author of this book), in which it is said (p. 11), “Connected with this Earl is the following legend: ‘The Countess being very desirous to know some important secret, the Earl, wearied at last by her importunity, agreed to tell it to her, on condition that she should undergo three trials; but warned her, that if she showed any sign of fear, it would be fatal to him. They then went into the great room of Kilkea Castle. In a short time an enormous serpent glided in, and entwined itself round the lady until its jaws were close to her face. She shewed no sign of fear, and the serpent left her. At a signal from the Earl, the river Greese rose higher and higher, until it flowed in a torrent through the room; but the lady was not alarmed, and it soon subsided. A knock was then heard at the door, and a gentleman to whom the Countess had formerly been attached, entered the room. But she, knowing that he had been dead many years, could restrain herself no longer. She shrieked, when the stranger immediately disappeared, taking the Earl with him; and, ever since, the Earl has been compelled, once in seven years, to ride on a white charger shod with silver, from that room to the Rath of Mallaghmast, and will continue to do so, until the horse's shoes are worn off."

Sylvester Gerald de Barri (a native of Wales, and, hence, commonly called "Giraldus Cambrensis"), writing, about A.D. 1188, thus speaks of the Geraldines (or FitzGerald):—

"In all services of war they were highly valued; always in the van, they were eminent for their valour and daring in every noble enterprise; but, as soon as the occasion for their services had ended, they were neglected and treated with the utmost contempt. But malice itself could not succeed in extirpating this generous race, so that even to this day the family, putting forth new branches, possesses no small share of wealth and power in this island [Ireland].

"Who first penetrated into the heart of the enemy's country? The Geraldines. Who have kept it in submission? The Geraldines. Who strike most terror into the enemy? The Geraldines. Against whom are the shafts of malice chiefly directed? The Geraldines. Oh, that they had found a prince who could have justly appreciated their distinguished worth! How tranquil, how peaceful would have been the state of Ireland under their administration! But they were always held in groundless suspicion; while confidence has been placed in others in blind security, who had none of their virtues. But, persevere, ye gallant kinsmen,* in the course of honour ye have hitherto pursued, not holding your lives dear, if spent in the path of glory; and “Felices facti, si quid mea carmina possint.”

“Blest if my feeble lines their worth proclaim,

“And weave their garland of immortal fame.”

“For worth is imperishable, and will receive its reward either in present or future times; and although, either through the remissness of princes, or the envy of others, the great services of the Geraldines have been hitherto unrequited, at least they shall have all the credit that my pen can give them. Let, therefore, this noble progeny take heart, and still toil onward from day to day, animated by increasing love and desire of renown, for their memory shall never be lost and perish; but, more precious than land and wealth, shall flourish for ever in the annals of glory.” (“Conquest of Ireland,” book 2, chap. 15 [Forester’s translation]. London: Bohn, 1863, p. 274.)

The following Epigram (long known to the Editor, and printed by the Duke of Leinster in his “Earls of Kildare,” p. 303, third edition, 1858) may be given here.

“Who killed Kildare?—

Who dared Kildare to kill?—

Death killed Kildare,

Who dare kill whom he will.”

The author and date of the foregoing are alike unknown.

It may, perhaps, to some appear irrelevant to introduce here matters not immediately bearing upon the subject in hand; but when the intimate relations of the Kildares with the history of Ireland, in general, and with Christ Church Cathedral, in particular, are considered, the notice of anything connected with that noble family cannot fail to be read with interest.

THOMAS PRIOR, ESQ.,

OB. A.D. 1751.

On a scroll in the hand of one of the figures on the Monument is the following :—

THIS MONUMENT WAS ERECTED TO THOMAS PRIOR, ESQ., AT THE CHARGE OF SEVERAL PERSONS, WHO CONTRIBUTED TO HONOUR THE MEMORY OF THAT WORTHY PATRIOT, TO WHOM HIS VERACITY, ACTIONS, AND UNWEARIED ENDEAVOURS IN THE SERVICE OF HIS COUNTRY, HAVE RAISED A MONUMENT MORE LASTING THAN MARBLE.

The Inscription, below, is in Latin ; and is from the pen of Mr. Prior's friend, the celebrated Bishop Berkeley :—

Mr. Prior wrote, amongst other things, some valuable tracts on the linen manufacture of Ireland; and recommended the wearing of scarfs at funerals, as an additional mode of disposing of the labour of the industrious to advantage: and this custom was first introduced at the funeral of Mr. Connolly, Speaker of the Irish House of Commons, A.D. 1729. (W. D., p. 114, and W. & W., vol. ii., p. 945ⁿ.)

Mr. Prior was interred in the parish church of the village of Rathdowney, in the Queen's County; where a marble monument is erected to his memory.

XXVII.

NATHANIEL SNEYD, ESQ.,

OB. A.D. 1833.

—o—

THIS MONUMENT
HAS BEEN ERECTED BY PUBLIC SUBSCRIPTION
TO COMMEMORATE A MAN
WHOSE HEART WAS THE ABODE
AND WHOSE LIFE WAS A PERPETUAL EXEMPLIFICATION OF MORAL, SOCIAL, AND DOMESTIC VIRTUES.
AN AFFECTIONATE HUSBAND,
A SINCERE, STEADFAST, AND GENEROUS FRIEND;
A USEFUL CITIZEN, AND A CONSISTENT SENATOR

HE FULFILLED THE VARIOUS DUTIES OF HIS STATION IN SOCIETY
 WITH EXEMPLARY FIDELITY AND UNSULLIED HONOUR
 IMPRESSED WITH A SENSE OF UNAFFECTED PIETY
 AND ANIMATED BY A SPIRIT
 OF THE PUREST AND MOST DIFFUSIVE BENEVOLENCE
 AND EVER FOUND HIS OWN HAPPINESS IN PROMOTING THE HAPPINESS OF OTHERS.

SUCH WAS THE GENUINE GOODNESS OF HIS NATURE
 AND SUCH THE INSTINCTIVE URBANITY OF HIS DEPORTMENT
 THAT DURING A LIFE PASSED IN VARIED
 AND EXTENDED INTERCOURSE WITH THE WORLD,
 HE WAS NEVER KNOWN TO ALLENATE A FRIEND,
 OR TO CREATE EVEN IN TIMES OF GREAT POLITICAL EXASPERATION
 A PERSONAL ENEMY.

INSCRUTABLE ARE THE DISPENSATIONS OF PROVIDENCE.
 THIS MAN SO BLAMELESS IN ALL THE RELATIONS OF BEING,
 SO RESPECTED AND SO BELOVED,
 PERISHED BY THE HAND OF VIOLENCE.

BUT IT WAS THE INDISCRIMINATING VIOLENCE OF AN UNHAPPY MANIAC.
 WHILE THE UNIVERSAL SENTIMENT OF PROFOUND AND POIGNANT SORROW EXCITED BY THE AFFLICTING EVENT
 AMONGST ALL CLASSES OF HIS FELLOW CITIZENS
 SUPPLIED THE TRUEST AND THE MOST EXPRESSIVE TRIBUTE TO THOSE VIRTUES

OF WHICH IT IS THE PURPOSE OF THIS MEMORIAL TO PRESERVE THE RECORD

AND

TO PERPETUATE THE REMEMBRANCE.

On another division of the Monument is the following:—

SACRED TO THE MEMORY
OF
NATHANIEL SNEYD, ESQ.,
CUSTOS ROTULORUM OF THE COUNTY OF CAVAN,
AND REPRESENTATIVE IN PARLIAMENT OF THE SAME COUNTY
DURING A PERIOD OF 36 YEARS.
DIED 31ST JULY, 1833;
AGED 66 YEARS.

(Mr. Sneyd was shot in Westmoreland-street by John Mason, brother of the Rev. Thomas Mason, LL.D., a clergyman of this city.)

 THE ELDEST SON OF ALDERMAN THOMAS ABBOTT, D.D.

 AN ENDURING RECORD
 OF EXEMPLARY PIETY, UNSTAINED HONOUR, BLAMELESS MORALS,
 OF FEELINGS ELEVATED AND MADE HOLY
 BY FAITH AND CHRISTIAN HOPE,
 OF A LIFE UNIVERSALLY DEVOTED TO ACTIVE BENEVOLENCE.
 HIS TIME AND THOUGHTS WERE DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF THE UTTERLY FORLORN AND DESPITUTE.
 FOR SEVENTEEN YEARS HE ATTENDED DAILY TO THE RELIEF OF THEIR WANTS
 AS HONORARY SECRETARY TO THE MENDICITY INSTITUTION, A VOLUNTARY SOCIETY
 FOUNDED IN 1818 FOR THE RELIEF OF THE POOR OF DUBLIN,

STATUES
CHARLES THE SECOND, AND JAMES THE SECOND.

THESE Statues, familiar to all frequenting the Cathedral, formerly ornamented the Tholsel, or Guildhall of the Corporation of Dublin ; and occupied the two niches in front of that building.

The Tholsel (or toll-stall, i.e., the toll-gatherers' stall, or seat) was erected in the reign of K. Charles II., A.D., 1683 ; and stood on the south side of Skinner's-row (now Christ Church-place), at the corner of Nicholas-street. It was taken down at the beginning of the present century.

For an engraving of the Tholsel, as it formerly stood, see Whitelaw and Walsh's "History of Dublin," p. 534.

A short time before the opening of the Cathedral for Divine Service, there was discovered, in making a new carriage-way, an ancient monument broken in two, and otherwise much defaced.

The figure is that of a female of high, and, perhaps, of regal rank; and it naturally invites speculation as to the person whom it represents.

Taking into consideration the long hair or head-dress which appears; the neck-piece or ornament worn by a lady of rank; the position of the left arm grasping the ornament, while the right holds the folds of the garment; and considering, also, the canopy over the head, which would seem to indicate that of a regal throne; Mr. Glascott, of Ulster's Office, is led to conjecture, though with prudent caution, that the figure is none other than that of Eva, Strongbow's wife and heiress of the Kingdom of Leinster, who is traditionally said to have been buried in Christ Church.

It is remarkable that the stone of which the monument is composed is similar to that of Strongbow's son in the nave of the Church; and that the dress, down to the waist, is of the same pattern, exhibiting the same fluted folds, and the same sloping shoulders, thus showing both monuments to be of the same precise style, and, consequently, of the same period. Close inspection reveals the remains of a canopy over the figure in the nave, like that over the figure just discovered.

Mr. Glascott's suggestion, if not generally accepted, is ingenious, and not at all improbable.

This interesting monument is now placed in the right-hand niche of S. Laurence O'Toole's Chapel, lately rebuilt, the niche on the left-hand being assigned to the old monument noticed No. II., p. 11.

(1) On the authority of Dr. Petrie, it would appear that the body of Bp. Donat (or Dunan) was, some years ago, found where it is stated that he was buried, viz., on the right hand side of the Altar (See "Grace's Annals," by Butler, p. 700). He was founder of Christ Church (C. F., 2 : 8).

(2) See Monument No. II. Under the well, in advance of which his monument stood before the present restoration of the Cathedral, were discovered human bones, which were supposed to be those of Strongbow.

(3) Erected St. Patrick's Cathedral, A.D. 1190. (C. F., 2 : 10).

(4) William, Lord Maxfield, Earl Marshal of England, created by King John, Earl of Pembroke. He married Isabel, only daughter of Earl Strongbow (Cox, p. 44). The Prior and Canons of Christ Church were to pray for his soul (B. O., p. 57). But on the other hand, a fearful malediction, even to eternal damnation, was pronounced against him by a Bishop of Ferns. For this malediction, and its supposed temporal effect, see King's "Church History" (2 : 672) and Ha'verty's "History of Ireland" (p. 256).

I.

STRONGBOW'S ADDRESS TO HIS SON (p. 9).*

O graceless son, who left thy sire
Amid the battle's din;
And the same moment, turned thy back
On Country, Kith, and Kin.

Inscription on the Monument to Strongbow, said by Leland to exist in the cloisters of Gloucester Cathedral (p. 9).

HERE LIES RICHARD STRONGBOW, SON OF GILBERT, EARL OF PEMBROKE:

* From the pen of the Rev. Canon Lyeppel, D.D.

III.

EPITAPH TO STRONGBOW (from Suvertius, p. 10).*

Victor yet vanquished ! Victor yet again—
 Unvanquished Victor still thou shalt remain ;
 Victor in Erin on full many a field ;
 Vanquished, when forced to Death's fell dart to yield.
 But Death itself shall not be Victor long,
 Vanquished by one invincible and strong,
 By Nature's law thy body sank in death ;
 But Fame undying bears thee on her breath,
 Victorious Fame shall triumph o'er the grave,
 Thy bones lie low, thy deeds our praise's crave.
 STRONGBOW'S great deeds forbid that they can die ;
 His fame abides on earth—his soul on high.

SIR HENRY SIDNEY'S MOTTO (p. 12).

Whither the Fates summon me [I go].

VI.

FRANCIS AGARD (p. 13).

Here is buried Francis Agard, Esq., at one time commander of a troop of Cavalry in Scotland, under Lord Seymour of Dudley, Admiral of England, afterwards appointed Seneschal of the County of Wexford in the war against O'Neill. Leader of one hundred horse; Chief Commissioner of the Province of Munster; and Seneschal of the countries of O'Brien and O'Toole. He was a most sagacious Councillor of the Kingdom of Ireland for twenty-six years, during the reigns of Mary and Elizabeth.

He died the 11th of October, 1577, when his right honourable friend, Henry Sidney was, for the second time, Viceroy of Ireland.

Together with him is interred his very dear wife, Jacoba de la Brett, with their infant son Thomas.

VII.

LORD GREY DE WILTON'S MOTTO (p. 14).

But Merit will overcome Poverty.

VIII.

MAJOR WILLIAM CADOGAN (p. 17.)

Near this spot are interred the remains of a most illustrious man, William Cadogan, Esq., Private Secretary to Thomas, the renowned Earl of Strafford, Viceroy of Ireland in the Reign of Charles I., and one highly esteemed for his rare mental endowments. Afterwards, while fierce rebellion raged, he, raised to the rank of Major, bravely fought for his Religion, his King, and his Country. Then, as a reward of his deserts, he was appointed Governor of the Borough and Castle of Trim, and made a gallant defence against the wicked traitors Phelim O'Neill and Owen O'Rowe.

He was born on the 5th day of February, A.D., 1600, at Cardiff, a chief town in Wales, having sprung from an ancient and illustrious stock; being the eldest son of Henry Cadogan, of Llanbeder, who was the second son of William Cadogan, of Trostry-Vach, in the Co. of Monmouth, Esq., who derived his paternal line from the Cambro-British Princes Ferlys and Powys.

His mother deriving her descent from the knightly and famous family of the Stradlings, of St. Donat's Castle, in the Co. of Glamorgan, was Catherine, daughter of Thomas Stradling, of Merther Mawr, in the same county, Esq., son of Robert, younger brother of Sir Thomas Stradling, of St. Donat's Castle, Knt., the fifteenth in succession of the same family.

He died the 14th March, A.D., 1660, having first witnessed what he had so earnestly desired—the safe return of His Most Gracious Majesty, Charles II., from his unjust exile.

IX.

AMBROSE CADOGAN, ESQ. (p. 18.)

Sacred to the Pious Memory of Ambrose Cadogan, Esq. who, to the extreme sorrow of his Parents, and all good men, departed this life on the 11th day of September, A.D. 1693. He lies buried with his distinguished Grandfather, on whose tomb his own epitaph is here separately engraved; and for his sake his afflicted Father, moved by tender affection, has caused this record to be subjoined.

THOMAS PRIOR, ESQ. (p. 26.)

Sacred to the memory of Thomas Prior, a man deserving, if ever there was one, the best regards of his Country; who, professing to be useful rather than to seem so; not elected to sit in Parliament; nor chosen to be a member of the Privy Council; and not distinguished by any public office, nevertheless, wonderfully advanced and promoted the interests of the common weal by his guidance, counsels, and unwearied exertion.

He was a man blameless, upright, and religious; in no wise addicted to the interests of party; not too careful of his private fortune, since he took a singular interest in the benefit of his fellow-citizens.

Whatever conduced to the relief of poverty, or to the elegancies of life; whatever tended to overcome the want of enterprise of the people, and to the promotion of useful arts, that did he cultivate to the extent of his power.

He was the Promoter, Founder, and Guardian of the Dublin Society.

What he did need not, in further terms, be told. Why should marble relate what all men know? Those things, namely, which are engraven on the hearts of his fellow-citizens; and which no time can efface?

XI.

ARCHBISHOP LAURENCE (p. 39).

Here are interred the Remains of Richard Laurence, LL.D., Archbishop of Cashel, and Bishop of Waterford and Lismore. What manner of man he was, in Ability, Learning, and Piety, let marble say not; let his own writings speak.

Whilst in the University of Oxford, devoted to Theological Studies, he became Regius Professor of Hebrew; and was summoned, though with reluctance on his part, to fill very high offices in the Church.

Exalted to the dignity of Archbishop, he, for a period of sixteen years, administered the affairs of his Province of Munster with a just and gentle rule.

He lived seventy-eight years and nine months; and died on the 28th day of December, in the year of our Salvation, 1835.

Appendix.

—o—

To those interested in the history of the Cathedral, is recommended an excellent work by the Rev. Edward Seymour, M.A., Precentor, entitled "The History of Christ Church Cathedral," Dublin, 1869, to the opportune publication of which, as setting forth the claims of the Cathedral on public notice, is to be attributed the munificent restoration of the fabric by Henry Roe, Esq., Jun., now completed.

A History of this Cathedral written, but only partially prepared for publication, by William Monck-Mason, Esq., author of the "History of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin," was, after his death, sold by auction in London, May, 1858, by Messrs. Sotheby and Wilkinson, 13, Wellington-street, Strand, for the sum of £21 10s., the purchaser being a Mr. Parker, who, it appears, secured the MSS., for the late Sir Thomas Philips, of Middle Hill, in the hands of whose Executors they now are.

Simultaneously with the re-opening of the Cathedral for Divine service, 1st May, 1878, there appeared from the pen of Mr. Robert McVittie, a work entitled "Details of the Restoration of Christ Church Cathedral," in which is embodied a multitude of facts, which would soon cease to be such (so far as forgetfulness could effect it) had they not thus been carefully recorded.

The present work and that of Mr. McVittie exhibit but few points of contact, each having been undertaken with a different object in view; and it is therefore hoped that Mr. Seymour's volume, supplemented by these latter, will present to the enquirer everything that may reasonably be looked for in the History, Antient and Modern, of the venerable, and now, beautifully-restored Cathedral of Christ Church.
